as we see it

■ We occasionally receive letters from readers who take affront at Laugh-In and the Smothers Brothers for poking fun at high government officials.

We cannot agree with this point of view; it smacks too much of the atmosphere of the tyrannies which man has spent the last few centuries trying to destroy. One of the glories of being an American is the right to open your mouth and say what you think—and if what you think is a criticism of a government leader, so be it.

■ Which brings us to another type of comedy critic—the one who writes us that comedy is comedy and he loves the boys when they make him laugh—but when they get into ideas—particularly ideas of which he doesn't happen to approve—they are off base.

We cannot agree that "entertainment" or "comedy" is some innocuous thing that produces laughter but must have nothing to do with the real issues of living.

■ Quite the contrary is true. The chances are that the court jesters got their biggest belly laughs out of the problems that touched the king most deeply. Moliere amused France with comedy based on serious ideas. Certainly Will Rogers, in a later time, found comedy in our Nation's most important problems. And H. L. Mencken kept America continually amused with satires of subjects which could have made you cry if you didn't choose to laugh instead.

After an adult has heard why the chicken crosses the road and why the fireman wears red suspenders, he's ready for something more substantial in humor. It says something for present-day America that Laugh-In and the Smothers Brothers are top of the heap, and that Milton Berle, despite our affection for him, is gone from the television scene.

At 6:04 last night, Mrs. Walter Russell started Polyunsaturating her entire family

...with a big assist from Mazola.

For years, millions of Americans have been eating a diet that is improperly balanced in terms of fats. Mrs. Walter Russell is no exception.

Today, however, she's doing what medical authorities are suggesting. She's serving her family a balanced diet, one which includes cutting down on total calories and fat calories, and replacing solid fats with the more highly polyunsaturated vegetable oils.

Since Mazola® 100% Corn Oil is highest in polyunsaturates of all leading brands, Mazola is the only brand for Mrs. Russell. It's the logical choice for you, too, for all your cooking and salad making needs.

No matter how many generations there are in your home, there's one thing you can all enjoy doing together.

Polyunsaturating.

P. S. She's got Mazola® Margarine in on the act, too. It's made with liquid Mazola Corn Oil.

As many readers of TV GUIDE may know by now, I have spent considerable time glued to my television screen, studying the various programs with my keen, analytical mind.

Science-fiction programs offer me the best target so it was with great excitement that I learned the new season would present a program entitled Land of the Giants, in which a group of pitiful human beings would be pitted, week after week, against various immense giant creatures. When young, I had spent endless happy hours over such classics as "Jack the Giant Killer," so you can well imagine that I was taken, at once, with the novelty and originality of the idea. I could hardly wait.

And yet the first episode had scarcely concluded when a vertical line of puzzlement was creasing the smooth marble of my massive brow.

Here's the way the series starts. A rocket plane is zooming toward London in 1983. It has a very typical, ordinary set of people on board, the kind you find on any rocket plane. There are two pilots of immense courage and resourcefulness, two girls of extraordinary beauty, a handsome man, a comic man, a cute little boy and a supercute little dog. This is rather similar to the collection of characters in Lost in Space, a program which, by an unbelievable coincidence, was produced by the same people.

Suddenly, the plane hits a space-warp or a time-warp or a transdimensional hypertunnel, or some science-talk thing like that, and is transferred into a world of giant, 70-foot people.

My first thought, naturally, was that this world of giants was not Earth. I mean, you can check me out on this but I think I'm correct in saying that there are no giant people on Earth. Even basketball players rarely top 7 feet. After all, if they were 70 feet tall, I would surely have noticed.

And yet, though not Earth, the planet was very Earthlike. From the way our heroes walked I could see the gravity was normal. What's more, it had a perfectly normal atmosphere. Oh, don't think for a minute I took anything for granted. For 15 minutes, I watched the characters' faces narrowly for any signs of respiratory difficulties. There was no rasping or choking; no coughing; no clutching at the throat. I called up a friend with a color set and he assured me there were no signs of cyanosis.

I even watched the dog. After all, human beings, through an effort of will, might ignore some trifling abnormality in the air they were breathing. A dog lacks this necessary sophistication but it didn't cough or choke.

But if the world had a normal atmosphere, it could not be in our solar system, where no planet but Earth itself has a normal atmosphere. Venus's atmosphere is almost pure carbon dioxide; Jupiter's is loaded with ammonia, and so on.

Yipes, cripes and other scientific expressions!

It thus became obvious to me, as I sat in my chair weaving my inexorable chain of logic, that the world had to be one that was outside our solar system, and was circling another star.

Could it be? After all, the average distance between the stars in our galaxy is about 50,000,000,000,000 miles. For that reason, the chance of ending up near a planet circling a distant star is very small as compared with landing somewhere in the 50-trillion-mile gaps between stars.

Actually, the odds against coming near another planet just by random accident are something like six hundred trillion trillion trillion to one. I kept waiting for someone to mention that fact.

I kept waiting for one of the pilots to say, "Gee whillikers, fellows, what a break! Here we are safe on another planet with the odds six hundred trillion trillion trillion to one against our having managed it."

But no one said it for some reason. The wonders piled up, too. Not only had they reached another planet, but it was exactly like Earth in every way but one.

When European explorers reached the New World, they found all sorts of novelties, even though they were still on the same planet. They found Indians, and feathered headdresses, and birch-bark moccasins, and tepees, and potatoes, and llamas, and tobacco pipes, and moose.

But what did our heroes find on this other planet? Human beings, exactly like us, wearing clothes in 1968 fashion (no, not 1983 fashion!). They had 1968-model automobiles, Brownie cameras, pussycats, matches, and everything else.

They even spoke straight 1968 English without an accent. Isn't that marvelous? If that rocket plane had just slipped over the English Channel, our heroes might have had to struggle with French, Dutch, even Hungarian, if they had gone far enough. But here on this far-distant planet, of course everyone speaks English.

In fact, the only way you can tell that this distant planet was not Earth was that every single thing was 12 times as tall as on Earth. Also 12 times as wide. Also 12 times as thick.

At this point, a blinding flash of inspiration struck me. Was such giantness possible? Suppose a man were 12 times as tall as normal. Also 12 times as wide. Also 12 times as thick.

He would, in that case, weigh  $12 \times 12 \times 12$ , or 1728, times as much as a normal man. He would weigh something like 170 tons under the planet's normal gravity.

But the giants had Earth-normal proportions. This meant the area of their thighbones would be  $12 \times 12$ , or only 144, times the area of normal thighbones. Each square inch of their thighbones would have to carry 12 times as much weight as each square inch of our thighbones. But our thighbones can only carry 10 times as much weight →

as they do before breaking. (Try standing up under a weight of nearly one ton and see for yourself.)

This meant that every time one of those giants would stand, his legs would break. With great excitement, I watched. One of the giants stood and I waited for the splintering sound of breaking bone, the cry of agony, the thunderous crash. . . . Nothing. The giant moved with ease.

Another thought occurred to me. The giants' vocal cords would be 12 times as long as ours. They would vibrate at a frequency three and a half octaves lower than ours. Their voices would rumble like the very lowest notes of the piano. . . . I won't keep you in suspense. They didn't!

I sat back in astonishment.

You can't argue with science.

Those giant creatures were not giants!

They were normal people. In fact, the whole world was normal. It was Earth itself. That explained everything, including the enormous coincidence of reaching a different world far away in space that was exactly like our own. It was our own!

Our heroes, in passing through the transdimensional space-time chrono-warp (or whatever) had simply shrunk in size to one-twelfth their height. Also one-twelfth their width. Also one-twelfth their thickness. They were still on Earth, but they were midgets.

To be sure, in some of the episodes, some of the giants would say, "The Little People come from Earth," but it was possible that in the excitement, the giants forgot they were living on Earth themselves. After all, small things like that do slip one's mind.

But then, I thought, well, if our heroes are midgets, their weights should be only  $1/12 \times 1/12 \times 1/12$ , or  $1/1728$  normal. Each one should weigh less than two ounces. The boy should weigh only one ounce. Their muscle strength would have decreased only by  $1/12 \times 1/12$  or  $1/144$ . They should therefore be some 12 times stronger, in proportion to their size, than normal people are. For instance, they should be able to bound 12 times as high for their height as we can. If they came to a set of stairs, it would be easy for them to jump up two steps at a time like tiny kangaroos.

I watched them narrowly, for I thought that would be a delightful sight to see. To my disappointment, however, the first set of stairs they came to, they worked their way up with harrowing effort by means of a spool of thread.

What's more, their vocal cords should have shrunk to only  $1/12$  the usual length, so they should be speaking in tones three and a half octaves higher than normal—like the topmost notes of a piano. Well, they weren't.

I fell back exhausted. I had stretched my enormous mental capacity to the limit and all I could figure out was that the giants weren't giants and the midgets weren't midgets. Everyone was normal, which was impossible.

In my desperation, I turned to my beautiful blonde, 13-year-old daughter and gave her a run-down of matters.

"How can one possibly explain this absolute impasse into which I have been drawn by faultless logic, Robbie?"

She looked up from her homework and said, "Obviously, Dad, the program is produced, through trick photography, by people who are scientific illiterates and who lack the slightest knowledge of the square-cube law that regulates the relationship of properties to size."

Such cynicism shocked me, and once again I was appalled at the Generation Gap that bedevils our society. I said to her, severely, "Let's have none of that hippie talk in here, young lady," and went back to my ruminations.

Giants? Impossible. Midgets? Impossible.

Television producers scientific illiterates? Surely impossible!

Which leaves me with two things: a giant dilemma, and Excedrin headache number 343 ( $x 12 \times 12 \times 12$ , of course).

Despite the beard and a role on 'The Doris Day Show,' Denver Pyle is still recognized as . . .

THE MAN WHO GUNNED DOWN BONNIE AND CLYDE

Recently, as he tootled down the Sunset Strip in his 1954 Armstrong Siddeley, one of the more obscure but ineluctably posh British-make motors, Denver Pyle paused for a red light, and at once a hippie type inserted his shaggy head into the open window. "Buy a Free Press?" he urged. It happens all the time along the Strip, where long-haired boys and girls stand on the corners peddling examples of the Los Angeles underground press. →

Pyle turned from profile to full-face, an unmistakably familiar figure with his drooping Buffalo Bill mustache, gray beard, flowing white hair and penetrating blue eyes. Suddenly the hippie's expression went sour. "Rat fink!" he snapped at Pyle. Pyle smiled and drove on, savoring the compliment to the persuasion of his craft.

"Very simple," Pyle explained to his bewildered companion in the car. "To the kids I'm the guy who did in their heroes, Bonnie and Clyde. I'm a symbol. The law. The fuzz. It's rather nice to be hated." In the movie "Bonnie and Clyde" Pyle portrayed the Southwestern sheriff who is at first humiliated by the outlaws and then, in the final ambush, helps gun them down.

Pyle is frankly delighted by the recognition. After 22 years as an actor, in the wake of over 100 television shows and a flock of movies, enacting a variety of roles from heavies to comedy, Denver Pyle is finally making an imprint on the public consciousness. Presumably, his role of the star's father in The Doris Day Show will establish his identity even further. "It was 'Bonnie and Clyde' that tied the name and the face together for most people," Pyle avers. "Before that, I was the guy whose face everybody knew." Even in the business itself, Pyle had until recently remained obscure. After he turned in a brilliant performance in a scene in the movie "Five Card Stud," the veteran director Henry Hathaway called him aside. "Denver," said Hathaway, "where have you been all these years?" Pyle shrugged. "Around," he replied. "I've been around."

Named for his parents' favorite city, Denver Dell Pyle—known to his childhood friends as "Mud" Pyle—was born 48 years ago in Bethune, Colo., the son of Ben and Maude Mae Harrison Pyle. The Pyles were dry-land farmers and life was harsh. By definition, dry-land farming is an endeavor in which you try to raise corn and wheat without irrigation and pray against dust storms: "A dry-land farmer tends to get stoic," says Pyle. "When the dust would come, we'd get the tractor out and start plowing again. Today I figure when you miss an acting job, it's kind of piddly next to a farmer who's lost 180 acres to the dust."

With vague notions of going into law, Pyle studied at the University of Colorado, where he also played the drums in a dance band. Then, one wintry day in his junior year, he hitch-hiked back to Bethune and confronted his father, who by then was working in a grain elevator. "You sick?" said Pyle père. "Nope," said young Pyle. "Just decided I don't want to be a lawyer."

The father stared at his son. "What do you want to be?" he demanded. Young Pyle shook his head. "I don't know," he said. "All right," his father said, "then go find out." With $14 pinned to a pocket in his jeans, Denver hitch-hiked down to Oklahoma, working first as a roustabout in the oil fields and then as a still-cleaner, meaning one who cleans out the coke in the riggers. After two years, he moved on to Galveston, where he labored on the shrimp boats. By 1940, Pyle had landed in Hollywood and was employed briefly at NBC as a page boy. In World War II, he saw service with the Navy aboard a civilian Liberty Ship, was wounded in action off Guadalcanal and then returned to Los Angeles to work as a riveter.

At the plant, Pyle recalls, there was a deaf mute who watched him telling stories about his experiences in the oil fields. "The mute made it known to me that he thought what I should really be is an actor," Pyle remembers. "I figured, well, why not?"

Subsequently, he tried out for a role in a little theater, winning the lead in his first play. He studied under such capable teachers as Maria Ouspenskaya, Michael Chekhov and Josephine Dillon, who had been Clark Gable's mentor. He acted and he also worked as a waiter and a hearing-aid salesman.

Ingenuity in bleak times was his long suit: "What I'd do, I'd go downtown to the big hotels, where they always had some convention or other. I'd wangle myself a button and put it on my suit—I always had that small-town conventioneer's look about me—and I'd enjoy myself at the bar and the buffet."

When television came along, Pyle became a mainstay on such Westerns as The Roy Rogers Show and The Gene Autry Show. Comic Pat Buttram, who was Autry's long-time side-kick, recalls Pyle from those days. "In our pictures," Pat drawls, "Autry was always 'Gene' and I was always 'Pat,' but Denver Pyle—now the characters he played had different names from his own. We figured he was really an actor—and he was, too." Gradually, Pyle earned his niche, mainly in Westerns. "Secret of my long overnight success is my good Western face," Pyle theorizes. "It's a face that goes well with a cowboy hat. If you can't wear a Stetson, forget it."

At first Pyle played mostly black-hat villains. When his hair turned prematurely gray, he graduated into playing sheriffs, bankers, circuit judges. "Besides being a damned splendid actor," says director John Ford, "Denver is a rare youngish man who can play old men and make you believe it. He'll be able to play the same kind of parts he plays now until he's 80!" Another director, Andy McLaglen, puts in: "Unlike so many older actors who lack energy, Denver, still in his 40's, plays an old man with vitality. He has a solid, earthy, American quality."

Pyle may play older men, but his own spirits are youthful, if not mischievous. Along with 32 other fun-loving followers of the sea, Pyle is a charter member of the Balboa Island Sculling and Punting Society, a group devoted to the good life, which, says Pyle, doesn't include sculling or punting. "What we've got going is a freeze-a club," Pyle explains. "We're always clicking our glasses and singing 'Freeze-a jolly good fellow!'" Each year on the anniversary of the repeal of Prohibition, the society convenes for a party in which the big event is the hanging of Senator Volstead, who initiated Prohibition, in effigy. "We just like to go out and kick a big hole in the sky," Pyle says. Once, for example, the society "sailed" to Las Vegas from Los Angeles aboard an ocean-going cruiser set on wheels and towed by truck. Another time they had a Pullman car placed atop a barge which was towed from Newport Beach across the bay to Catalina.

Pyle's own craft is an old flush-deck wheelhouse cruiser he calls the Erma P. Cordonner, named for the postmistress in Bethune. "Back home, as in all little towns, it was always the postmistress from whom all good things came," says Pyle.

When he isn't acting or boating, Pyle follows his hobby of collecting and repairing clocks. His house is loaded with clocks—pendulum clocks, mantel clocks, all kinds of clocks. "Friends give me their clocks to fix," says Pyle. "Nights when I can't sleep I get up and work on a clock. It's good therapy." The Pyles—his wife, Marilee, and two sons: David, 12, and Tony, 11—live in a substantial, old Spanish-styled home originally built by Al Jolson in the 1930's for his parents. "I like the remnants of distant grandeur," Pyle says. "I like old houses, old cars, old clocks, old people. I like antiquity."

Pyle rarely discusses acting, and his social contacts with fellow actors are few. "Most actors are pretty dull," he contends. "I'm not one to sit around discussing who's doing what picture. I keep thinking that somewhere guys are building bridges and here I am, a grown man, playing cowboys and Indians." Periodically, he makes noises about quitting the profession, a threat taken seriously by none of his friends.

"Acting?" says Denver Pyle. "You can't say much for acting except that it sure beats shucking wheat."

HOW THE NETWORKS STUBBED THEIR TOES

The medium stumbled in Chicago, but observers agree that it did not fall

A piece of "conventional wisdom" about the Democratic Party's meeting in Chicago last August has it that the press, especially television, portrayed the events as a straight-out contest of good versus evil: the good dissenters (both inside and outside the hall) versus the bad Establishment.

But in fact, many TV newsmen were careful to attempt setting a journalistic balance, even in the heat and confusion of those explosive events. CBS's Roger Mudd, for example, complained during the Wednesday night session, which saw Vice President Humphrey nominated, that the dissenting minority of delegates in the hall were not behaving with suitable good grace. "When you lose a case in politics, you usually accept the vote and go on and try to win it another time," said Mudd.

"It occurs to me that we're suffering at this convention from a massive case of political bad manners," he added,

"and the special goat became Mayor [Richard] Daley." He wondered if the dissidents thought that "this convention could get along without security. They vented their spleen on Mayor Daley and anything he controls. And over the course of the past two or three days I observed what I concluded to be deliberate attempts by the anti-Humphrey people to provoke incidents that would perhaps succeed in disrupting the convention."

He disagreed with Georgia delegate Julian Bond's charge that such important issues as war, poverty and racism had not gotten sufficient hearing at the convention; and he questioned the recurrent notion among some observers that the police and National Guard were totally at fault for the riot in Grant Park and Michigan Avenue. "I talked to reporters last night who were there who said that the police were right," Mudd insisted. "I don't know that we're absolutely correct in calling it unprovoked."

ABC's anchor man Howard K. Smith, the day before the conclave began, defended Mayor Daley's stringent security measures, while calling one of the principal protest organizers (David Dellinger) "intolerant and bellicose." The Amphitheatre was being cordoned off, said Smith, "from a small fraction of people who, under protection of a very elaborate system of rights, have developed a skill at disruption. . . . Mayor Daley may have overdone it, but if you or I had the responsibility, you or I, too, might say, 'I won't let it happen here next week.'"

On the meeting's final night, Smith summed up by saying that if the convention had been run with a rough hand, "so are all conventions, and they must be. They're big, amorphous blobs of determined men always on the verge of chaos, and without strong handling a convention would last for weeks without any commensurate achievement." He said that the dissident delegates had had the "fullest scope to speak and to act" on every matter of substance.

NBC's Chet Huntley, during an informal on-the-air seminar with his fellows, suggested that many of the young demonstrators were "obnoxious" and were being quite purposeful in their baiting of the police. CBS's Eric Sevareid wondered if the rumors of a Sen. Edward Kennedy candidacy were not, at least in part, the creation of TV reporters looking for an intriguing story.

(In a postconvention speech at Columbia University, Sevareid admitted that "now and then in Chicago, under the exhausting pressures and complexities of those violent events, some of us lost our cool. But not very often, nor did it stay lost very long. We are, after all, human beings. . . . I cannot join with some of my colleagues who make a blanket defense of our work there: but I think the emergence of the full truth will reveal that our efforts were more respectable than a good many critics now seem to think.")

All such utterances—and there have been others—by network newsmen suggest that the TV coverage was not quite the simplistic Passion Play nor the blatant partisan exercise which many viewers seem to recall, but a complex, evolving story told in varied fashion by scores of reporters responding to it in diverse ways.

TV GUIDE asked several academicians for their thoughts on the meaning of Chicago vis-a-vis television's presence and importance: Prof. William Wood of the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism suggested that events of such high emotional content accentuate people's response to how journalists fulfill their responsibility. "We obviously are not getting a cool, reasoned critique of television's job in Chicago."

The "high-handed" behavior of Chicago officials agitated many TV newsmen into losing their objective sense, Wood says. "We occasionally did perceive reporters' private feelings through their tone of voice, and these are men who are, of course, supposed to be absolutely impervious" to any such lapses.

"The network newsmen were required to make many quick decisions based on their news judgments," Wood says, "and here I think the more sensational story prevailed when it sometimes shouldn't have. . . . In a convention, as in other events, you don't constantly have the breaking story at a high pitch. But the networks are eager to hold their audiences, and they must fill time interestingly. So they sometimes latch onto stories which are lacking in substance, and say to themselves, consciously or unconsciously, 'Let's keep this thing going.'"

The events of Chicago have brought some "quiet self-examination" to the networks, according to Wood. "This → wave of criticism isn't all bad. The whole world of journalism is thin-skinned. We're liable to yell First Amendment every time we need to. We're not particularly graceful under criticism. But when the FCC demands explanations of network news decisions, then this is a very serious business. I would line up with the networks in insisting that the FCC exercise caution in these matters; otherwise it might lead to some kind of restriction, and that is not the answer."

Penn Kimball, consulting editor to the Lou Harris survey and also a professor at the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, believes that the violence at Columbia University during last year's student uprisings exceeded that at Chicago. "Much more brutality was visited upon the Columbia students than on the Chicago dissenters. But in Chicago you had the stereotype of the machine boss in Mayor Daley, whereas in New York you had the picture of a progressive mayor in John Lindsay."

Lindsay managed to get through the Columbia revolt without anybody blaming him, Kimball says, but Daley was a "natural villain in terms of broad stereotypes. He is one of the cliches of our time: an old machine politician. The media contribute to these stereotypes: they tend to glorify the hero and vilify the villain. As it happens, both Daley and Lindsay are pretty good mayors, each in his own way."

The Chicago riots illustrated a peculiar problem faced by TV news, in Kimball's view. Some of the pain might have been avoided, he feels, if reporters had been assigned to follow the street violence without cameras or microphones, doing an old-fashioned news-gathering job on foot, and feeding the facts to their anchor men.

"Television tends to limit itself to that aspect of news which they can get a picture of," he says, "and that is a fragment of the total story."

Kimball believes that the Senator Kennedy boomlet began with "a little piece of validity," and then it became advantageous for some delegates—the ones who were fighting for a strong anti-war platform plank—to nurture it. "What is a reporter to make of it when responsible people are telling him Kennedy may be a candidate? There was indeed something to the story, but the boom was never real, and TV—and everybody else—inflated it."

TV newsmen are in "the biggest goldfish bowl in journalism," according to Kimball; they're aware of the inherent pitfalls of their trade and are doing the best they can as honestly as they can to avoid them. He suggests they not be concerned by irate letter writers—even the tens of thousands who expressed themselves after the convention.

Kurt Lang, a professor of sociology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook and co-author (with his wife) of the book "Politics and Television," feels that networks are indeed dedicated to the "principle" of objectivity in their reporting, and when they make mistakes it's because the story is fast-moving, and because reporters, human and fallible, must view events from some perspective.

When TV coverage dramatizes something which transgresses our prejudices, we automatically look for bias in the reporting, Lang says. "The network newsmen surely were guilty of unwitting bias. It was literally impossible to describe that convention the way it happened; it had to be reported from some point of view."

But newsmen, whether TV or print, "must make judgments" about events their professional lives touch, he claims, and that is not easy in the case of events so dependent on television as is a political convention. The reporters are well aware of how much is being staged for their benefit by the convention organizers and so they're fond of taking the viewer backstage and → showing him the inner workings.

"To keep the political establishment honest is a useful function of television news," Lang adds. "That's the point of journalism and part of the gratification of the profession. The kind of stories a good journalist takes pride in are the ones in which he can point out what the facts are as against what they seem to be."

TV journalists must take some of the responsibility for what happened in Chicago, Lang says. "They inadvertently contributed to the uproar in their search for interesting interludes. But that to me is not the same as slanting the news."

In spite of what many people think, Lang says, the disturbances outside the hall received not too much coverage, but not enough—certainly not enough of the right kind of useful journalistic exploration. TV's cameras and reporters dutifully reported the presence of thousands of young people and their subsequent angry collisions with the police and National Guard.

"But here was a marvelous opportunity before a mass audience to conduct an investigation in depth about what these demonstrations and these young people really meant," says Lang. "Who were they? Where did they all come from? Why, in fact, did they come to Chicago at all? What does it say about our institutions? Why should young Americans walk around waving a Vietcong flag? What moves them to shout, 'I want to destroy the whole Establishment and see it come tumbling down'?

"Nobody I know in TV has attempted seriously to answer these questions. The networks were covering the violence, all right, but not what it means to all of us for now and the future."

And that, many observers insist, is the better story. END

A medically sound treatment for most painful hemorrhoids

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

CBS to Stay with Most Shows

TV fans who like what they see on CBS these days seemingly can rest pretty easy about next season. The network feels it has such a comfortable lead in the ratings that it may undertake one of the lightest new-season overhauls in history. Aside from The Jonathan Winters Show, Gomer Pyle and The Queen and I, none of the current shows appears definitely on the scratch list. A top-rank CBS spokesman, commenting on a rumor that Hawaii Five-0 and The Wild Wild West might be dumped as too action-oriented in the present antiviolence climate, said he "would guess there will be neither an increase nor a decrease" in CBS's action-adventure fare. In short, Hawaii Five-0 and The Wild Wild West would be bumped only if something hot comes up, which isn't likely.

ABC's Second Season blew a psychedelic fuse. Unveiled as Peyton Place II's replacement, Turn-On, a Laugh-In gone berserk, got enough of its viewers and the network's affiliated stations so instantly switched off as "dirty" or "vulgar" that ABC called the series off. The following Wednesday night the network plugged the vacant half-hour by starting its 9 P.M. (ET) movie 30 minutes early. Going into late last week, ABC brass still hadn't figured out what to turn on next.

San Francisco State College's widely publicized student turmoil is being subjected to a probing look by an NBC News team for a 90-minute prime-time report to be aired April 22. As a follow-up to a two-hour "White Paper" on urban ills, televised last Dec. 30, the program will portray the campus as a microcosm of American society, particularly as it reflects the White Establishment's reactions to pressures for social change. "What we have here," muses NBC producer Fred Freed, "is a kind of 'Roshomon' in which people see the realities in totally different ways." Freed doesn't promise answers, but he intimates he has reason to believe his December telecast prompted the Nixon forces to step up their priorities for attacking problems of the cities.

For a playwright who some months ago swore off writing for TV presumably forever because of its literary strictures, Rod Serling (Twilight Zone, etc.) is a busy man. Recently he was disclosed to be scripting a proposed ABC series, The New People, about the Now Generation. Now Serling is reported engaged also in writing a two-hour World Premiere movie for NBC in which he'll appear as a plot-explaining host. The film will consist of three slightly related suspense tales ("Something like Somerset Maugham's 'Trio,'" explains NBC chief West Coast programmer Herb Schlosser), with a different star in each. Already cast for Serling's "Night Gallery": Joan Crawford, Roddy McDowall and Sam Jaffe.

ANSWERING THE SENATOR

Senator Pell's article on TV violence ["Television Violence Is Harmful," Feb. 1] was a perfect example of how totalitarian laws are imposed under a cloud of euphemisms. When he says the "balancing of private freedoms and the public interest" he means an end to the former. . . . Freedom is indivisible. The First Amendment does not say that only some forms of speech are exempt from the control of Congress. Censorship is the hallmark of a totalitarian society; let us not impose it in a new wave of prudery about violence.

Byron Von Klock

The problem of American unlawfulness, violence and crime is a matter to be dealt with by laws, and the making of those laws is the senator's profession—his efforts could be better spent at that. His suggestion of Government program control is like prescribing aspirin for a headache when the patient really needs brain surgery.

TEACHERS HAVE CLASS

As a teacher, I take issue with your author's comment that a certain TV actress who is not especially pretty seemed not like an actress, but "more like a schoolteacher" ["Maggie Parker of Hawaii Five-O," Jan. 18]. The author appears to be basing his assumption on the old stereotype of the teacher, and may not be familiar with her changed image today. Many are quite as attractive and young as many TV actresses.

THE GHOST AND MR. CHICKEN (NBC), Monday
THE PERILS OF PAULINE (NBC), Tuesday
THE LOST COMMAND (ABC), Wednesday
SEX AND THE SINGLE GIRL (CBS), Thursday
THE GLASS BOTTOM BOAT (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

Between the premieres and the re-runs that have already become part of the network-movie season, a tailored-for-television World Premiere film holds out the most promise for the week if only because it seems to bear some relation to the world around us.

"Deadlock," an unknown quantity at this point, is at least topical in that it involves a black district attorney with political ambitions, a white police lieutenant who suspects the DA's motives and a community on the brink of open racial warfare. How the Robert E. Thompson-William Sackheim-Chester Krumholz script will cope with the issues remains to be seen; at very least we can look forward to a number of reliable performers, chief among them Ruby Dee, Aldo Ray and Leslie Nielsen.

For noncombat suspense fans, there's "The Slender Thread," a fact-based story of Seattle's Crisis Clinic, wherein the telephone wire is the slender-thread lifeline between Anne Bancroft, a would-be suicide, and Sidney Poitier, a clinic volunteer trying to save her. The film seems attenuated and theatrical at times, but its premises are intriguing.

For blood-and-bullets fans there's "The Lost Command," with Anthony Quinn barely making even like Quinn in a role that calls for Errol Flynn. Muddled in plot and politics, it at least has realistic battle scenes, which the characters survive longer than our interest does.

All else is supposed to be light-hearted fluff—and a polite term that is. "The Ghost and Mr. Chicken," tailored for the skittery-milquetoast talents Don Knotts exhibited on The Andy Griffith Show, simply lays an egg. What might have been a passable half-hour on television is coddled and curdled into thrice its tolerable length.

With "The Perils of Pauline" what might have been never was. This "zany"—i.e. corny, frenetic and senseless—film was intended as the pilot for a television series that never came off. The film doesn't either.

Leave it to Hollywood, however, to mix sex and sun and to the networks to keep rerunning it. "Sex and the Single Girl" is for those willing to devote two hours of their lives to a consideration of Natalie Wood's virginity, Tony Curtis's virility and the twain meeting. For the rest of us it's just another queasy moviedom venture into the smutty suggestivity that is Hollywood's overstock in trade.

"The Glass Bottom Boat" involves Doris Day with Rod Taylor, nasties who suspect her of spying and some good comics like Dom DeLuise and Paul Lynde. In the burlesque tradition (to get a laugh just drop your pants) Miss Day, costumed as a mermaid, drops her fishtail at the start of the movie and earns her laugh. It's the last she got out of us.

Suddenly you know the special value of BLUE CROSS®

Hospital admission is quick and simple—only Blue Cross has contractual arrangements with nearly all U.S. hospitals—over 7,100. Blue Cross pays them directly—in full—for all specified services. There's a wide range of medical benefits and you may select your own physician and surgeon.

Blue Cross protects more Northern California people in group health plans than any other organization, and more individuals have also selected Blue Cross for themselves and their families. Blue Cross has a plan that meets your needs best—regardless of age.

For individuals there are Blue Cross "Plus" plans that provide up to 6 full months of major hospital protection, broad physician and surgeon benefits and emergency care extras.

For those 65 and over Blue Cross 65 is the companion plan to Medicare. You are eligible to apply any time before your 65th birthday or within 90 days afterwards. If you were 65 more than 90 days ago, you will receive information on special enrollment periods. Costs only $4 a month.

Morning*PRESIDENT NIXON'S TRIP

President Richard M. Nixon is scheduled to leave Washington today for a week-long visit to Western Europe. The trip, planned to reaffirm Western unity, will include meetings with the heads of state of each country on the itinerary.

Accompanying him are Secretary of State William Rogers, Presidential Assistant Henry Kissinger—and approximately 100 network newsmen.

The President's schedule calls for stops at . . . Brussels: meetings with NATO leaders. London: Prime Minister Harold Wilson. Bonn: Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger. Berlin: a visit to the Wall. Rome: an audience with Pope Paul VI. Paris: President Charles de Gaulle.

Extensive network coverage will be seen on regularly scheduled newscasts. The networks have announced mid-morning satellite shows and late-evening film reports, pre-empting regularly scheduled programs. In addition, CBS has scheduled prime-time specials on Thursday and Friday.

★ to introduce you to the CLASSIC MOVIE LIBRARY

From The Jazz Singer to Forty-Second Street to My Fair Lady, See the Screen's Most Talented Stars Performing In the Greatest Scenes of All Time!

Over 475 masterful photos recreate all the fabulous dancing, singing, fun, excitement and sheer spectacle that has made Hollywood's great musicals and their stars the top "audience pleasers" of all time. Here's Maurice Chevalier, one of the early musical's biggest stars with songs like "Louise." Throaty Marlene Dietrich in "The Blue Angel" growls out the lyrics of "Falling in Love Again." Dick Powell woos his perennial sweetheart Ruby Keeler in big, dazzling revues like "Flirtation Walk." Eddie Cantor serenades the Goldwyn Girls in "Roman Scandals." Dorothy Lamour joins Bing Crosby and Bob Hope on all their trips in the various "Road To" pictures. Fred Astaire leaps like a Gazelle through movie after movie with Rita Hayworth, Ginger Rogers and Cyd Charisse. Shirley Temple brings music to children's pictures with tunes like "The Good Ship Lollipop." Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald, wrapped in each others arms, replace kisses with songs like "Indian Love Call." Judy Garland in "The Wizard of Oz" follows the yellow brick road to find the magic land "Somewhere Over the Rainbow." William Holden and Kim Novak in "Picnic" dance to the sensual strains of "Moon-glow." Elvis Presley brings his bumps and grinds to the screen in movies like "Viva Las Vegas"—while lovely Natalie Wood does the same in "Gypsy." Julie Andrews and Dick Van Dyke sing and dance their way across London's roof-tops in Walt Disney's "Mary Poppins." And even the Beatles are here, with scenes from their smash hits "A Hard Days Night" and "Help."... Plus many more of the greatest scenes from the musicals!

Thrilling Commentary Gives You A Fascinating
"Insider's" View On 300 Of The Greatest
Musicals - Their Stars, Stories, Supporting Casts, Directors, Composers and Choreographers!

In all over 300 films come to life again in this magnificent 255-page volume—each described in fascinating, entertaining detail! You'll read about that amazing October night in 1927 when Al Jolson got down on one knee and sang to his "Mammy" and the singing came right from the screen. What a miracle!—The movie musicals (and talkies) were born. You'll see remarkable, "rare" photos of some of Hollywood's soon-to-be big stars like Gary Cooper, Lucille Ball, Jean Arthur and Fredric March—working in the choruses of early musicals. You'll trace the fabulous "Golden Era" of original movie musicals when Gene Kelly burst forth in one stunning screen musical after another—and you'll see the best of them, including his sensational performance in "Singing In The Rain"—probably the best movie musical ever made! And you'll enjoy highlight moments from the best, most entertaining musicals brought from stage to screen.... You'll see the Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers," Jerome Kern's classic "Showboat," Irving Berlin's big war-time revue "This Is The Army." You'll enjoy spectacular scenes from Rodgers and Hammerstein's biggest musicals, "Carousel," "Oklahoma," "South Pacific" and Julie Andrews' smash hit, "The Sound of Music."... Plus, "My Fair Lady," "Music Man," "West Side Story," "Porgy and Bess," "Guys and Dolls," "The King and I"... and many others!

Best of all, you'll be personally introduced to a gallery of 150 of the greatest, most beloved stars in all filmdom. Greats such as Nancy Carroll, Beatrice Lillie, Rudy Vallee, Fanny Brice, Ray Bolger, Jimmy Durante, Alice Faye, Kate Smith, Lena Horne, Mitzi Gaynor, Mario Lanza, Donald O'Connor, Mary Martin, Ethel Merman, James Cagney, Leslie Caron, Mickey Rooney, Sophie Tucker, Howard Keel, Dan Dailey, Betty Grable, Marilyn Monroe, Doris Day, Debbie Reynolds, Pat Boone, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Judy Holliday, Rex Harrison, Audrey Hepburn, Barbra Streisand... plus many, many more in addition to the stars mentioned earlier!

ferent records to choose from...hit albums from every field of music, from scores of different record labels! You may accept the monthly selection for the field of music in which you are mainly interested...or take any of the other records offered...or take no record in that particular month.

RECORDS SENT ON CREDIT. Upon enrollment, the Club will open a charge account in your name...you pay for your records only after you have received them—played them—and are enjoying them. They will be mailed and billed to you at the regular Club price of $4.98 (Classical, occasional Original Cast recordings and special albums somewhat higher), plus a mailing and handling charge.

FANTASTIC BONUS PLAN. As soon as you complete your enrollment agreement, you will automatically become eligible for the Club's bonus plan—which entitles you to one record free for every one you buy. There are no "saving certificates" to accumulate, no delays, no limitations—every time you buy a record, you get another one free! Under this plan you pay as little as $2.66 per record (including all mailing and handling charges) for all your records.

MAIL THE CARD TODAY! Just write in the numbers of the twelve records you want for which you will be billed only $3.98, plus postage and handling. Be sure to indicate the type of music in which you are mainly interested.

Note: Since stereo records may now be played on monaural (regular high-fidelity) phonographs, and cost no more than monaural records, all your records will be sent in stereo.

CLOSE-UP*DAVID FROST8:30 5

SPECIAL COLOR He is called "the master" because it is easier than calling him "actor-playwright - songwriter-author-director - entertainer-wit." He is, in short, Noel Coward, who displays a good deal of his versatility in this interview with David Frost.

The hour is replete with reminiscences of Coward's long career in the theater, abbreviated by observations that are best described as punch lines. Anecdotes range from the time Coward finessed Laurence Olivier into taking a bad part in "Private Lives" to a disagreement between Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt over the lyrics in Coward's song "Mad Dogs and Englishmen."

Coward also reads speeches from his plays "Cavalcade" and "Post Mortem" (an antiwar play never produced in the U.S.), and sings and plays some of his songs in piano interludes. (60 min.)

Doctors Find Way To Shrink Hemorrhoids, Stop Itch—Relieve Pain IN MOST CASES.

Doctors have found a medication that in most cases makes it possible to actually shrink hemorrhoids. In case after case, while gently relieving pain and itching, reduction (shrinkage) took place.

The answer is Preparation H®. There's no other formula like it for the treatment of hemorrhoids. Preparation H also soothes inflamed, irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In Ointment or Suppository form.

- "I'm sorry, child. These days one is forced to do a lot of things one doesn't like—but war is war!"—C. Aubrey Smith to Michele Morgan in "Two Tickets to London" (1943)

Recently a man in New Orleans, an acquaintance of Raymond Burr's for two decades, made a long and drunken testimonial to Burr's virtues. He talked about what a "nice guy" Ray was, "what a lot of laughs" you had with Ray, and how great it was that Ray "supported a lot of relatives and a bunch of kids in different countries": "A nice guy. He's had a real sad life. A nice guy."

He said "nice guy" so often that Linda Galloway, the wife of Raymond Burr's Ironside co-star, Don Galloway, finally choked in irritation. "Raymond," she said coldly, "is not 'nice.' He is unusual. He is interesting. He is extraordinary. But 'nice' isn't the word." And then she turned to us and elaborated: "Ray is the most variable, individual man I know. He changes from minute to minute. He is like a lot of different men. Sometimes he is sharp, sometimes he is dull. He can say the same words on different days and they'll mean a hundred different things. Sometimes they'll be a caress, at other times an insult or a snub. He is so . . . complicated!"

Raymond Burr is complicated. One of the most popular actors in America—and in 71 other countries—he has been under observation for more than a decade by the U.S. press, which has shown relatively little insight into him. Most of his biographers have summed him up in essentially the same shallow terms as his drunken pal in New Orleans.

By the more literary, he has often been cast as a combination of Falstaff and St. Francis of Assisi—a giant of a man who quakes with merriment, quaffs goblets of mead, devours royal meats, succors the ailing and aged, and communes angelically with little children and beasts of the fields.

But jollity and benevolence are scarcely the essence of Raymond Burr. They are his disguise.

Beneath this disguise, he is a tormented man who, more than most people, has both massive strengths and massive weaknesses. Last week we described the powerful Burr—a solitary, remote man with an authoritative, intimidating manner, a strong intolerance of stupidity, a violent temper, a powerful will, and a harsh, even bitter, pride. This Burr is virtually a spiritual replica of the Ironside he projects on screen.

But this Ironside strength co-exists with a seething mass of pent-up emotional distress. Burr is also an unstable, darkly tense man who constantly reveals signs of inner torment. Some of the signs are obvious, like the series of compulsions that enmesh him: compulsive eating, compulsive tidying, compulsive working, compulsive do-gooding. Most are far more subtle. They take the form of mercurially shifting emotions, oscillating intelligence levels, sudden disconnections from conversations, gigantic pouts, infantile sulks, desetic silences and abrupt withdrawals from human contact.

He is locked up in repressive defenses and finds it virtually impossible to open up emotionally. Even simple social intimacies are hard for him. Linda Galloway says, "Ray can't say good-by. Oh, if it's a bunch of civic leaders at an airport or something, he can shake hands or make chitchat. But if he cares for you at all he can't say good-by. He just turns his back and goes away."

His own complex identity weighs heavily on Burr's mind—he is often in an introverted, brooding state of self-inspection. But mainly he attempts to escape his inner anxiety. And it is characteristic of the man that most of his escapes are creative.

His major and most time-consuming flight from his problems lies in acting, where he has selectively projected his strengths, and a good measure of his struggle against pain, into the characterizations of Perry Mason and Ironside. He works with slave-like discipline and has virtually lived on the set at times.

On top of this, he compulsively creates extracurricular labors to consume any spare time he may have. Don Galloway says of him: "He's continually spawning ideas for projects. He's the kind of man who decides to go to bed at 1:30, so he gets into his pajamas at 1 o'clock, and he's ready for bed by 1:11; then he has 19 minutes left; so he sits there for 19 minutes and thinks up four new projects; then at 1:30, he goes to bed. And the thing is—the next day, he does them!"

Burr's nonacting projects at one time or another have included voracious reading (he has an almost encyclopedic knowledge in the arts, sciences, zoology, oceanology, archaeology, anthropology); the creation of commercial art galleries; various business and industrial projects; the creation of a little private zoo; drama teaching in colleges; sports; and the purchase of a private world—an island in Fiji, in which he functions as a businessman, agricultural expert and educator of the native population.

Probably his major mechanism for escaping inner disturbances, however, is to engage in good works. He has acquired a growing reputation throughout America as a "great humanitarian." Reporters, who tend to be suspicious of public saints, have checked on his do-good projects and discovered that he really does do them. What few people check on is how he actually feels about them.

There is strong evidence that he isn't very fond of conventional do-gooding at all. We watched him launch a United Fund campaign in New Orleans, and he nearly expired with boredom before our eyes. He was so withdrawn in his iron-faced way—at a dinner given by civic leaders for "Burr the Humanitarian," that he was virtually an empty Olympian hulk sitting at the table.

When it was all over, he freely admitted his disenchantment with this type of activity. "If all you had to do was to come to town and make a quick speech to help them out, that would be ideal," he said. "But there are meetings and parties and autographs. The fun isn't there for them if you're not a little available. So you → go through with it. But it's a terrible drain, a terrible drag." As for his inner state at the dinner, he said: "I suppose I was tolerating people. I think tolerating people is dreadful. Dreadful! But I suppose I do. Behind the social facade, I'm remote. My mind is really elsewhere."

Ray has a new do-good project which is genuinely interesting and, logically, he likes it best. He has virtually adopted Florida Memorial College, once all-Negro and now an integrated school, as his private fief, and is going to try to raise sufficient money in order to turn it into an international multiracial center, with student-exchange programs and trade ties to Central and South America, and Africa.

We watched Burr through two days of meetings in Miami on this project. He was surrounded by lawyers, financiers, political figures, Negro and white educators, and two black militant professor-observers from Watts. He was not vacant, tantrumy or bored. He was Ironside again—dominating the scene by force of will and personality.

There is little question that if Raymond Burr pulls off this project, he will indeed be acclaimed throughout the world as a "great humanitarian"—and the mind boggles at the testimonial dinners he will have to endure. But worthy as this cause may be, it is undoubtedly the biggest hair shirt he has ever woven for himself: he will have to work very hard for years to accomplish it. And though it will certainly benefit others, it will scarcely benefit him where it counts. Hair shirts don't resolve emotional conflicts.

Why is this tough-minded, creative, money-making, internationally inspiring man a living caldron of frustrations? Why does he feel a growing compulsion to invest his life energies for greater and greater chunks of the human race?

Two people who know him well suggest an answer. A good friend of his, Gordon Schaber, dean of the McGeorge

School of Law in Sacramento, Cal., says: "He is a very extraordinary man, a man with strong emotions, strong values and strong convictions. But for some reason he doesn't feel he should express them openly. He seems to feel there is something wrong about it. Almost as if it's guilt."

Another friend says: "Ray's trouble basically is that he is a violently self-assertive man who thinks self-assertion is wrong. He was taught as a kid that being good meant crucifying yourself for your mother. It hardened into a kind of stoic virtue. Now he feels he should crucify himself for the world. But he doesn't want to. He's really greedy for life. He's spent his life submissively climbing onto crosses, hating it, and hating himself for hating it."

This is as close as we can get to the historical source of the distress, and Raymond Burr confirms it amply. The commanding, authoritative man who says of himself, casually, "You know me—I'm imperious. I expect the world to know what I want," also names mystically accredited figures like "Socrates, Gandhi and Schweitzer" as his moral ideals, and declares he wishes to emulate their "gentleness." It is fairly clear that his imperious personal values cannot stand up under the weight of these "gently" self-immolating models.

He is paying a great price for his ethical conflicts. He exists in a state of virtually nonstop tension, alienation and self-condemnation. It is not too much to say that he is both one of the most gifted and one of the most troubled men in Hollywood. He is a tragic and paradoxical being—a man of self-esteem who can't acknowledge it, a man of major achievement who can't respect it, a man who has inspired universal love and can't believe it, a man with a brilliant capacity for life who can't permit himself to live it.

He is Ironside—self-damned for not being Christ.

Another little idea that made it.

As the highest paid man in team sports, Wilt Chamberlain occupies a curious position. He doesn't take his $250,000 a year with a smile. He chooses, instead, to torture those who pay him in the National Basketball Association. Periodically, he threatens to run off and join the Harlem Globetrotters. He once threatened to quit and turn boxer. He listens with uncommon interest to a variety of other offers.

Still, the NBA market remains strong for Wilt, proof of which is he is playing this year with another new club, his fourth. What's more, the owner gave three front-line players to get him.

Jack Kent Cooke, proprietor of the Los Angeles Lakers, made the deal with Philadelphia. Did Cooke consider this, together with the responsibility for Wilt's salary, a risk?

"Every time you try something big," says the L.A. owner, "the risk is there. But I am perfectly satisfied that Wilt will perform."

As this is composed, Chamberlain is performing. He also has battled sporadically with his coach, who has shown the impudence to use Wilt in a manner not meeting the latter's approval. When coaches do this to Chamberlain, he gets very upset. But the crowds are coming out to see him, as expected, and ABC, which does the telecasting of the NBA games, is convinced that each time Wilt is on the air, interest in the show increases.

Basketball can use the help. A game followed almost fanatically by a hard core of fans, it has yet to emerge as a first-level spectator sport over which TV interests will fight for rights.

Chamberlain points out, however, that the game has made noticeable strides in the 11 years he has played as a pro. The value of the franchises has expanded, and the lot of the player has improved, too.

Wilt does not minimize the part he has played in the salary struggle of the pro basketball worker. "When I first came into the NBA," he says, "the highest paid player, Bob Cousy [of Boston], was making $22,500 a year. I was offered a contract by Philadelphia calling for the fantastic sum of $25,000. I informed the gentlemen that I would get six figures—or they would never see me in the NBA."

Asked how the management responded, Wilt replied: "They said to me, 'You're crazy. Basketball can't afford to pay that kind of money.' I proved that it could. The six-figure salary is no longer a rarity. I have taught fellows like Bill Russell and Oscar Robertson and Jerry West and Elvin Hayes something about ceilings. Without being immodest, I think I can call myself the pioneer in this field in basketball."

It has been said often about Chamberlain that he has been the ruination of many of those who have coached him. This is possibly due to the fact that Wilt doesn't care to be coached. "Some are born to lead and some are born to follow," he says. "I have never been a follower. But one thing I've never done is get a coach fired. I have never forced a showdown where it has been the coach or me."

At his new station, Los Angeles, Wilt hasn't exactly taken to his bosom coach Bill van Breda Kolff, an Ivy Leaguer who came to the Lakers last

Of course, at $250,000 a year
he doesn't need much more support season. If the truth is known, in fact, Van Breda Kolff and Chamberlain have gotten along like Harvard gets along with Yale.

Wilt acknowledges his temperament, but takes the position that his moods are overdramatized by critics who whitewash the temperament of others. Not long ago, Chamberlain complained to this correspondent: "Take a fellow like Bill Russell. He became coach of the Celtics for one reason. When Red Auerbach retired as coach, Bill didn't want anybody else to coach him. He has his idiosyncrasies like the rest of us and he felt that maybe a new coach would irritate him. So Bill demanded the coaching job and he got it. If I tried anything like this, there would be a Federal investigation."

Joining a team with such other superstars as Elgin Baylor and Jerry West, Wilt considers this a distinct hazard. "If we lose," he says, "it is obvious what the critics will say: 'It serves the Lakers right for getting that troublemaker, Chamberlain.'"

For all his crises, Wilt remains the dominant figure on the NBA telecasts, which open annually in late December and run until mid-April. The mail increases when he appears, each parlor authority offering the solution on how to defense him or on how to use him to greater advantage on offense. A day rarely passes in which the Lakers' Van Breda Kolff doesn't get suggestions from TV viewers, local or national, on how to deploy the famous center, who rises 7 feet 1-1/16 inches and weighs 275. Since Chamberlain, too, tells Van Breda Kolff how he, Wilt, should be deployed, the coach, you can see, isn't standing short of advice.

In the NBA telecasts, it is the boast of ABC that it is able to give the viewer precisely what he wants—the most interesting game each week, which hasn't been true of some other sports, college football, for one. Whereas the NCAA fixes its TV schedule before the start of the season, the NBA remains flexible, picking each Sunday game during the previous week. Obviously, in this procedure, games that don't bear impact are eliminated.

Basketball on television, according to Chamberlain, is anything but a joy to the performer because of the wide-scale criticism it invites of his play. "As sports go," says Wilt, "basketball is a relatively simple game. Everyone can tell whether you make a free throw or miss it. Or whether you make the right pivot or control the tip-off. It isn't undercover work like, say, playing offensive tackle in football. Who among the viewers knows what this man is supposed to do? Who can even see what he does? Since most fans don't know the functions of the tackle, they can't criticize him."

"How do you explain the criticism you get?" Wilt was asked.

He answered quietly, "No one pulls for Goliath."

It also is a fact that no one pays much for David.

Drifter, rebel, nonconformist, James Stacy takes his private war to the 'Lancer' set

By Arnold Hano

Jim Stacy has declared war on the system.

Jim who?

Jim Stacy. James Stacy. One of the two sons on the Western series Lancer, CBS's answer to Bonanza.

Two days after shooting started on Lancer, at 20th Century-Fox's Hollywood studio, Stacy interrupted a scene. A line bothered him. It wasn't his line. No matter; when Jim Stacy is working, all lines concern him. He studies every camera angle, watches a director's every move (and questions every other); he memorizes every part, and when a line doesn't ring true, he speaks up.

"All right," the director conceded. "The line is bad. We'll change it."

Jim Stacy, 31 years old and with prior credits so minute you could write them on the head of a beer, was not satisfied. How come—he wanted to know—the line was still in the script? Who goofed?

Back in his dressing room, Stacy shook his head. He gulped most of a bottle of red wine with his lunch. "I have to stop this," he said. "I don't want to drive myself crazy."

He can't stop. He has declared war. Directors, he says, try to make you over in their image. "I have to do my own number, not theirs." A television series, he says, is boring. Stacy has a five-year contract, if Lancer runs that long. "It won't," he said shortly before the show went on the air. "I give it one season." But now that Lancer looks good for renewal, Stacy says he expects it to be back in the fall, describing it as "an average, good Western."

On the Lancer set Stacy is odd man out. The other son is Wayne Maunder

(most recently of Custer); and the patriarch, Murdoch Lancer, is Andrew Duggan. They mesh well; Stacy sits by himself, reading Buddhist philosophy or tootling "Scheherazade" (badly) on a melodica. "The crew doesn't like me," Stacy said last fall. "I keep them late on Friday nights. I don't do takes fast enough for them. They resent it. I don't joke with them. They feel if you don't joke, you're not a good guy. I don't give a damn. I have to do it my way. My job isn't to please them. Besides they're rude. They make a lot of noise."

Now he says, all that "was in the beginning. We didn't know each other. It's a great crew." But he still gets "up tight when we get a bad director. We get a lot of those."

James Stacy has to do everything his way. Take the pilot (which became the first episode) of Lancer. In one scene Stacy meets with the bad guy, who wants Stacy to join his gang. They talk in a bar, but talk—alone—doesn't satisfy Stacy. He reshapes the scene. He brings in a bottle of tequila, pieces of lemon, some salt. Now while they talk, Stacy and the bad guy suck lemons, lick salt from the back of their hands, swig tequila. The scene comes alive. Stacy made it.

So when you mark the name and write him off as oddball, ingrate or whatever, remember this: he's got something. And he comes on big.

Not physically big. Stacy, physically, reminds you of John Garfield, a better-looking Peter Falk, a darker Brando, a young Norman Mailer. He claims he's 6 feet tall, which is fiction, and finally agrees he's 5-11, which he is—in his cowboy boots. But he manages to fill the screen.

If he does make it big, it will be a change. He's been loser of the week for 1600 weeks. He tried college and lasted less than one semester. He tried pro football and flopped. He was fired from one movie and had his lines stripped from him in another. He made a thunderously disastrous marriage, losing his wife, Connie Stevens, to Eddie Fisher.

Stacy was a drifter, a fistfighter until he was 20, a playboy on the Strip. He did what came easy and fled what came hard. Now he is doing what comes harder than anything else in his profession—the deadly dull paces of a weekly TV series—and he is doing it well. The answer to the contradiction may lie in the role he plays—Johnny Lancer: drifter, outcast, rebel, nonconformist, the son who is uncomfortable within the confines of a family and a fenced spread. Johnny Lancer → wants out. "The role fits me," Stacy says.

James Stacy is descended from Syrian caliphs with romantic names like Ya-Ja. He was born in Burbank, Cal. "My old man was a bookie, a loner. I remember him getting calls from the police, that he was going to be raided. So Dad swallowed the bets—or flushed them down the toilet—and the cops would come in, and pull out the phones, and Dad cooled it for a week."

Stacy's folks broke up when he was 17. "My mother remarried. I see her occasionally. She's very happy. I guess."

At John Burroughs High Stacy played football and basketball, and ran on the track squad. For extracurricular sport, Stacy fought. Anybody. Everybody. "I was the toughest kid in Burbank." One fight sticks in Stacy's memory. "A guy came to class with too-long hair. He carried a knife. In metal shop we grabbed him and cut off his hair. He returned with a pal, Skooky Houston, the toughest kid in North Hollywood. Skooky and I fought for 40 minutes. We were down more than we were up. We became good friends."

Stacy attended Glendale Junior College and quit after the football season to join Vancouver of the Canadian pro league. "It was too brutal. I'd outgrown violence. I was traded to Montreal. After one game I quit."

This was 1956. He took a bus to New York, where he met an actress who interested him briefly in theater. Stacy made a Pepsi commercial and, with $400 in his pocket, went to Europe. "I did the red-light district in Amsterdam, down by the river. I was broke in three weeks." Today Stacy's studio biography tells how he survived in Europe by boiling spaghetti, sweeping floors, digging ditches. Stacy did all this, but mainly his sister mailed him $350 in Pepsi residuals.

He returned home in early 1957 and tried acting on the West Coast, where he sometimes earned as much as $2000 a year, most of that in unemployment compensation. "I did not know how to act. I had no feeling. I was awful." He meandered to Hawaii, where Joshua Logan was auditioning for the film "South Pacific," looking for sailors. All the sailor types, says Stacy, were Mr. Americas. "Logan kept saying, 'Relax,' but they were too muscle bound. He said to me, 'Relax,' so I lay down on the ground. He thought it was cute as hell and hired me. I kept losing my hat. I fought with the assistant director. Finally they said, 'Get the 5 P.M. plane out of here.'"

Later Stacy again met Logan, this time interviewing for "Sayonara." Logan asked, "What can you do?"

"I lose my hat," Stacy said, and Logan must have thought it was cute as hell again, because he hired him.

Stacy had two scenes. In the first he had to greet Marlon Brando, coming off a plane. Brando ad-libbed his lines, and Stacy immediately ad-libbed back. In his second scene, Stacy's three lines were given to another actor.

Back in Hollywood, Stacy took to partying. He married Connie Stevens. Stacy will not talk about it today. A Hollywood writer says, "Who'd talk about a marriage where you lose your wife to Eddie Fisher?"

But all was not bleak. Stacy met drama coach Donna Drew, and his career instantly brightened.

"She found out I love animals, I love quiet things. She made me apply this to emotional scenes. One day she said, 'Suppose your dog died?' and I began to cry. It was the first time I'd cried in front of people. I'd become sensitive, aware."

CBS spotted the change and signed Stacy late in 1966 to a series, The Freebooters. To celebrate, Stacy and his new 19-year-old bride, actress Kim Darby, went to Hawaii, only to have CBS cancel the show on the way across. But CBS came up with →

Lancer, and Stacy made a deal in August of 1967, although he says today, "Lancer isn't as good as Freebooters."

Why, then, is he making Lancer, as if $2000 a week, instead of a year, isn't reason enough?

"I need a series, to get a break. No one gives you a break. You make your own. People will get to see what kind of actor I am." So while he fights the system, he does get exposure.

And it may be that he exaggerates the war he fights. The crew of Lancer insist they really do like him. Assistant director Bill Kissel says of Stacy: "He makes good suggestions. He works slowly, because he has ideas. He always adds to the scene. He won't let you shoot junk."

Actress Elizabeth Baur, a series regular, says: "I like to work with Jim. If the scene doesn't go right, he'll stop. You know he's in charge." But when you ask Miss Baur what she thinks of Wayne Maunder, the other son, she says quickly, "He's a doll." Nobody calls Jim Stacy a doll.

So it stands. He says he will be on the set at 4, but he is not. He is instead reading J. Krishnamurti, the Buddhist philosopher who says gurus are OK but it is better to do your own number than adopt a guru's. Kim Darby introduced Stacy to Krishnamurti. Kim has a quiet manner. Some of it has rubbed off on Stacy, who used to drive motorcycles to work, trying to break Steve McQueen's record, and who now only occasionally pushes his Porsche to 107 mph. Stacy and Miss Darby, who have a seven-month-old daughter, have been separated and reconciled.

Stacy keeps two goldfish in a bowl. "I rap on the bowl, and they come to the top. Then I feed them. We communicate that way. Still, it is a bad existence. I'd rather be a whale."

You don't love whales. Whales aren't dolls. But they come on big. Ditto Jim Stacy.

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

This is one more show which starts out with high promise and reasonable premise and promptly falls flat on its console. NBC has had this year entirely too many of these fallen souffles. It's time they either got a new chef in charge of looking at what's cooking or else a new Vice President in Charge of Believability. In any case, the show comes to you via Sheldon (I Spy) Leonard and stars as Tony a young Italian boy (Enzo Cerusico) whom Leonard discovered for an I Spy episode in Rome. Tony plays what is billed as the "fun-loving legman" of professor-detective John Woodruff (James Whitmore) in what is called a "mystery-comedy." Mystery loves comedy all right these days, but whether or not they should get married is, judging by this show, an entirely different matter. Mr. Leonard himself has declared that the accent here will be on action. "The comedy element," he said, "will be secondary, growing out of the story and arising simply because our characters have a sense of humor."

They would have to. In the first show the opening scene is one in which a girl (Brooke Bundy) is parking in an automobile by a lake with a man she's fingering to be murdered. He is murdered—and then she turns out to be not only the girl friend of the crooked crime commissioner but also the sister of the murderer, who later on gets murdered himself. But—now get this—she also turns out to be the good girl and the girl with whom good guy Tony falls in love. It's quite a switch, all right—Lady Macbeth to Miss America in one show—and when Tony is leaving she says, "Most girls cry at a time like this." We couldn't have agreed more, except for one thing—she was almost at the end of the script and should have been happy as a clam.

Another episode starts with four teenagers having a marvelous time tying another teen-ager to the railroad tracks in front of an oncoming train. Later it turns out to have been a fraternity initiation stunt. But again—steady now—it also turns out that still later one of the fraternity brothers does try to murder the guy. Though he's unsuccessful, still another brother does succeed in murdering him. Meanwhile, fun-loving legman Tony is, of course, having a ball. For one thing, his English isn't very good, and in a show like this, that's a big advantage.

The fact is, though, Mr. Cerusico is good. He can be both different and likable. The only thing he can't be is believable and this is hardly his fault because, compared to what goes on around him, he's the Gospel according to St. Luke. As for James Whitmore, he's one more example of what we've seen so much of this season—a fine actor in a phony part. In episode three, incidentally, the professor got his chance to fall in love, but by this time he was so confused, he fell in love with a client indicted for murdering her husband. Got her off, too—and then, you know what? She had done it, after all. There were extenuating circumstances, of course, but unfortunately this episode was not one of them.

Four flash pictures in a row are better than one flash picture in a row.

When you're taking flash pictures with a Kodak Instamatic 124 camera, you don't have to change the bulb after each shot. Not when you have a four-shot flashcube.

The 124 gives you other advantages, too. Like instant loading. Compact size. And good, sharp color snapshots or color slides.

For less than $20, you get the 124 in an outfit with flashcube, wrist strap, batteries, and Kodak film for color snapshots. So you can start flashing right from the start.
